PLAN FOR WATER GATE IS MODELED ON FAMOUS PIERS

William T. Donnelly Has Had Features Designed by Bloodgood Tuttle of New York

ALL PASSENGER SHIPS WOULD UNLOAD THERE

Telling of his purpose in presenting to Honolulu plans for a water-gate or marine terminal, William T. Donnelly, consulting engineer of New York, now visiting here, at the Pleasanton, has written at the request of the Star-Bulletin a detailed account of the proposed structure, his perspective of which is shown today.

Mr. Donnelly is one of the most eminent engineers in his profession. He built the 20,000-ton drydock at Prince Rupert, B. C., designed the piers for the Inter-Island's new Kalihi coaling plant, and planned the temporary drydock at Pearl Harbor.

Among the engineering societies of which Mr. Donnelly is a member, are the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, the Maritime Association of the Port of New York, and the Machinery Club of the City of New York. His article follows:

Entrance For Arrivals.

"I have brought with me to Honolulu and desire to submit for the consideration of all those interested in the development of the city illustrative drawings showing a water-gate or marine terminal designed to provide a suitable and proper entrance for all passengers arriving by steamer.

"The plan contemplates a pier 200 feet in width by 600 feet in length so located on the water front as to make it readily possible for all entering passenger steamers to touch at the outer end or head of the pier and land passengers and their baggage with the least delay upon arriving, and then to proceed to other piers for the handling of cargo, touching again at the passenger pier upon their way out. Huge Swimming Pool.

"The pier is also intended to provide a recreation center upon the water front in the heart of the city, and the provision of a swimming pool 100 feet in width by 400 feet in length would make it suitable for the holding of Carnival events, the shore end of the swimming pool to end in a beach which would be extended to form a natural stage decorated with growing palms and other tropical foliage thus creating the floor of the islands, the background to terminate with the representation of a volcano peak.

"The landing from the steamer would be under an arch 100 feet in span at the head of the pier at an elevation of approximately 30 feet above the water, and the gallery or deck at this level, 50 feet in width, would extend the entire length of the building on each side, with stairways to the lower street level and to an upper gallery. These provisions would make a possible seating capacity at Carnival events for between 20,000 and 25,000 people.

Tuttle is Architect.

"The architectural features of the drawings have been worked up under my direction by Bloodgood Tuttle, a well-known architect of New York, a graduate of the University of Chicago and also of the Art Institute of that city. Mr. Tuttle has studied abroad, and is a member of the Architectural League of New York and the Society of Beaux Arts Architects, and has been connected with the designing of a large number of important structures such as the Baltimore cathedral and the Panama-California Exposition under B. G. Goodhue.

"The general design, while somewhat in advance of anything previously submitted, is the outcome of observations covering all the cities and harbors of the United States and Canada and many of those of other countries. New York City now has many recreation piers, at some of which excursion and river steamers touch, notably the great Day Line passenger steamers of the Hudson river, the largest of these steamers being authorized to carry 6000 passengers; this vessel, the Washington Irving, often takes on or discharges 1200 or 1500 passengers while touching at the head of a pier for 20 minutes.

Big Piers at Seattle.

"At Seattle, Wash., there are at least two three-deck piers of the same general construction as proposed in this design; these are of course constructed of wood, and while some consideration has been given to suitable waiting room and interior decoration, they are entirely without the recreation features.

"Generally speaking it would seem most suitable to provide at Honolulu a water-gate or entrance to the city and islands, more particularly as all visitors must arrive and depart by water, and it should be pointed out that the development as outlined would lead up naturally to the subsequent development of a civic center. It would determine for all time the point at which visitors would arrive and depart."

Mr. Donnelly will speak on the project before the Outdoor Circle tomorrow.

Flour Mills at Winnipeg have completed the shipment of 5000 carloads of flour for the French army. The flour cost $1,000,000.

The University of Kiel has begun the collection of all meritorious poetry concerning the war.

Plan For Palatial Pile at Which All Steamer Arrivals Will Be Unloaded When They Reach Honolulu, If Donnelly's Plans Can Be Worked Out By City

Gigantic passenger terminal, of water gate, for arrival and departure of passengers. The plan, by Bloodgood Tuttle, includes a monster swimming pool, and would allow seating capacity for more than 25,000 people for water carnivals or swimming meets.

CONGRESS MUST DEFINE POLICY, SAYS PRESIDENT

Insists Country is Entitled to Know How Representatives Stand on Foreign Issues

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless]

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2.—President Wilson is winning all along the line. The congressmen who found themselves aligned against him are running to cover as fast as possible, pocketing their various resolutions warning Americans against using armed merchant ships flying the flag of any of the allied nations, and the situation is rapidly smoothing itself out.

Mr. Wilson told congressional leaders who called upon him at the White House yesterday that he is not minded to accept any compromise. The issue before the house and the people, he said, is a clear cut one, and one upon which he himself, and the people of the country are entitled to know just how Congress stands.

Wants Definite Action. Talk of a vote of confidence in his administration was met by the chief executive with the statement that this would not serve. He does not want a vote of confidence, he said, pleasant as such a vote might be at some other time. What he needs at present is definite information as to the attitude of congressmen on the question of Americans traveling in armed merchantmen. This information, he added, is indispensable to the proper conduct of his foreign policy.

STRIKING WORKERS RIOT IN SPAIN'S CAPITAL

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless]

LONDON, Eng., March 2.—Madrid is in the throes of a general industrial strike, according to a despatch from the Reuter correspondent in the Spanish capital.

The strike originated amongst the bakers, who closed down their ovens and walked out as a protest against the high price at which dealers were holding flour. The example set by the bakers was followed by other trades until the strike became general and trade is completely at a standstill.

Yesterday there were several riots and a number of persons were injured in the clashes between the strikers and the police. The situation has grown, so out of hand that the mayor of the city resigned yesterday.

TESTS OF LEADERSHIP WILL BE SCOUTS' ENCAMPMENT FEATURE

Boys Planning on 10 Day Outing at Kailua During Vacation at Easter Time

Something never before tried in the history of Hawaii's Boy Scouts will be put on at the coming annual encampment of all scout troops of the Honolulu area to be held during Easter vacation near Kailua, this island.

It will be, according to Special Field Commissioner J. A. Wilder, patrol contests in which the leadership developed in each will be shown and the cohesion and morale of each patrol tested.

"The office is now working on problems of a semi-military nature, but mostly pioneer or backwoods work, to test leadership," says Mr. Wilder. "We are going to do another thing never before done in our history, which is to go in a specially chartered boat and take our luggage. We have chartered the Mokoli from Capt. Eben Low and will make the voyage to Kailua Beach in her."

"Two big steers are now fattening and six cords of wood to roast them are piled near the hidden spring, ready for the encampment, which will start two days after Easter vacation begins."

This spring is somewhere near Kailua and its location is known only to a few. It was betrayed to us by Pepe, who is in perfect health at the age of 90 years and was a personal friend of Kamehameha V.

"She will tell the boys folklore connected with the campfire grounds and she has also said she is willing to teach them the art of weaving if least sandals. Her knowledge of folklore is extensive and our campfires should be more instructive and entertaining than in many moons. The hidden spring is on her land."

Mr. Wilder says the encampment will last 10 days, and about the middle of this month a banquet for scoutmasters of all troops in the area will be held at which plans for the annual encampment will be outlined.

President John Guild of the local scout council and Mr. Wilder will make the presentation of prizes won in the Carnival by scout troops as soon as Mr. Guild, who is a very busy man, gets time to attend to this. Prizes are not awarded to individuals, but to the troops to which they belong.

Propose Home for Japanese Young Women

At the suggestion of Deaconess Spencer, who for several years has been doing excellent settlement work among Japanese women and girls here, the members of the woman's auxiliaries of the Episcopal church in Hawaii are working toward the building and endowment of a home for Japanese girls in Honolulu.

According to the present plans, the home would be used as a settlement house where girls' clubs and women's meetings could be held. Japanese girls coming from the other islands could pay a small sum for their board and live at the home while attending school.

An endowment fund of $10,000 a year would be needed for maintenance. Deaconess Spencer would be in charge of the institution and would be assisted by a capable matron. It is planned to call the proposed institution St. Hilda's House after St. Hilda's College, where Deaconess Spencer received her training.

A site for the institution has been chosen and already plans are under way to hold a Japanese fete on the grounds of the Hawaiian Hotel two weeks from Easter, the proceeds to be devoted to the building fund.

BRITAIN WOULD BAR REMINGTON TYPEWRITERS

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless]

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2.—The British government has requested the government of Australia to prohibit throughout the Commonwealth the further sale of the typewriters manufactured by the Remington Typewriter Company of Ilion, N. Y., on the grounds that the company is suspected of selling supplies to the enemies of the Empire.

The Remington Company, which has been notified by its Australian representatives of the British request, has appealed to the department of state to formally present the denial of the company to the allegation of the British government.

The company states that the actual reason for the charges made against it is that British typewriter manufacturers are jealous of the success which the Remington machines are having in the British colony and are desirous of shutting it out as a competitor.

DEMOCRATS OF EMPIRE STATE BACKING WILSON

Fiscal Policy of Administration Praised By Chairman of Convention

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless]

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 2.—Representatives of the Democrats of New York state met here in informal convention yesterday, former Governor Glynn presiding and delivering an address which is taken to be the keynote speech of the Democratic national campaign and a reply to the keynote speech made recently by Elihu Root, at the Republican state convention.

Governor Glynn, following his election as permanent chairman of the state organization, contrasted the fiscal policy of the Wilson administration with that of the Republicans, which had brought on the disastrous panic of 1907.

Banking Law Big Achievement. "Mr. Root opposed the enactment of the legislation that gave this country the federal reserve, which event has proved to be the greatest achievement for the country's good accomplished by any administration that has been in power for the last 50 years," said the speaker.

The creation of this new banking system saved the United States from a panic during the opening weeks of the European war, he declared, and prevented a recurrence of the panic of 1907.

Scores Roosevelt. "For that panic, Mr. Root, as a member of the Roosevelt cabinet, shares in the responsibility of his chief," he said.

The informal convention ratified the actions of the various Democratic committees in endorsing the candidacy of President Wilson for a second term.

The delegates voted that the regular delegates elected to the national convention in St. Louis be sent unpledged and uninstructed, but that they be nominated on the understanding that they will work for the reelection of President Wilson.
